JUSTIN REMEMBERED

"Justin showed us
what a championship was all about."
Barry McQuillen, Justin's grandfather, said after Justin's death. "He was a champion in every way."
McQuillen said Justin was a very good person and a very good player. "He was a champion in every way," he said.

LEWIS, Pa. (AP) — Justin McQuillen, a 19-year-old baseball player, died Saturday of a heart attack. He was a member of the Reading Phillies.

Justin eulogized as champion

By Mary R. Young
Staff Writer

Justin McQuillen wanted to be remembered as a major league baseball player; instead, he will be remembered as a player in a league all his own.

"He showed us all how to play together as a team," said his grandfather Barry McQuillen, during a ball field memorial service that drew thousands of people Saturday.

Medical Center, eight days after being struck by a pitch in a game on the Ploverville diamond, behind Robeson (Plover) Lutheran Church along Route 10.

The members of Justin's Honey Brook team and the Ploverville team opposing them when Justin was injured lined up along the base lines while Justin's family, league officials, and others gathered around the pitcher's mound.

If business owes it, he will come

It is Reading taxes. He is Nicholas Panarella, a Philadelphia lawyer rapidly becoming very unpopular in the suburban commercial and professional ranks.

By Kevin Crumney
Staff Writer

Inevitably, he will come calling. The majority of Berks County businesses, large and small, will, sooner or later, become familiar with the name Nicholas Panarella.

Panarella, head of a large Philadelphia law firm that bears his name, is the city of Reading's new tax man.

His mission: to seek out businesses or service-providers that are located outside city limits but make a portion of their income in the city.

The plan is to then apply the city's business privilege tax to that income.

His message to those who try to avoid cooperating or complying with his program: "There is no escape. If you do business in the city, you should comply. If anyone is given advice not to comply, I would question that wisdom."

Panarella was brought aboard by City Council late last year, and has thus far made 1,400 contacts in Berks.

The number will grow significantly in the coming months.

Eventually, he will leave every municipality in the county. From there, he will begin contacting out-of-county and out-of-state businesses that have done business in Reading.

Although Panarella's association with the city has been the subject of numerous published reports and the topic of discussion within the Berks County Chamber of Commerce and the medical community, the reactions of many businesses that have been contacted by Panarella suggest the full scope of his activities has not been completely comprehended.

What we are doing is leveling the playing field for businesses located in Reading.

Nicholas Panarella, Reading's new tax man, will seek out businesses that make a portion of their income in Reading.

Contrary to some beliefs, businesses within the city are not really affected.

They presumably already pay the business privilege tax. It is businesses located everywhere but Reading that are the object of Panarella's collection effort.

Panarella admits that his initial foray into Berks has wrought more resistance than in any other area in which he has worked. Panarella's client list includes cities, townships, boroughs and school districts in the state.

His biggest client is the city of Philadelphia.

"The overwhelming misconception I have encountered so far is that this is somehow unfair to Reading businesses," Panarella said.

"What we are doing is leveling the playing field for businesses located in Reading," he said.

As an example, Panarella cites Reading's group he will soon be contacting on name.

Family, friends maintain vigil at Jackie's apartment

NEW YORK — Flowers kept coming. Mourners grew in numbers. And members of the Kennedy clan gathered again to say goodbye Saturday to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

Mrs. Onassis' body lay in her 15 room Fifth Avenue apartment, where she died of cancer Thursday night "surrounded by her friends and her family and her books," said her son, John F. Kennedy Jr.

FUNERAL DETAILS
Viewing: Private, at her apartment at 1040 Fifth Ave.
Funeral: Private, 10 a.m. Monday, at St. Ignace of Loyola Roman Catholic Church, Park Avenue and East 84th Street.
Burial: Private, Monday afternoon, at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

On Saturday, her granddaughters, 8-year-old Rose and 4-year-old Tatiana, arrived outside her apartment house in matching red coats, raising images of the 8-year-old Caroline Kennedy, her father's 1961 daughter.

The girls past a media horde of photographers, photographers and reporters, were piled outside the apartment entrance. Sources said Mrs. Onassis' body was prepared for burial early Friday and that she could not be moved from the apartment until just before the funeral on Monday.

Meanwhile, the White House said Saturday that Hillary Rodham Clinton will attend the funeral service in New York on Monday and President Clinton will speak at the burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

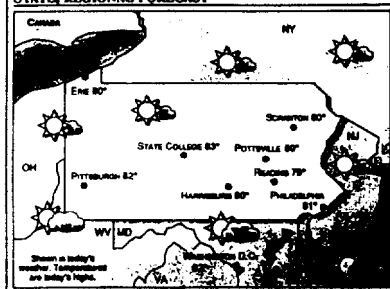

The Kennedys turned down a Clinton offer to fly Mrs. Onassis' coffin to Washington aboard a government jet and were chartering a private plane.

Impeach on Larsen

■ If impeached — akin to being charged with misbehavior in office — Justice Rolf Larsen would face a trial in the Senate with senators acting as jurors and five House members the prosecutors.

Associated Press

HARRISBURG — Historic, and impeachment proceedings against Supreme Court Justice Rolf Larsen open this week with lawmakers clinging to those judgments.

The proceedings are viewed as historic because the Legislature has not impeached a judge in 160 years. They are considered historic because lawmakers realize the justice's reputation and livelihood are at stake.

The state's decision to impeach Larsen is seen as a landmark because public confidence in the judiciary cannot be restored until the allegations against Larsen — whether true or false — are aired in a Senate trial, his accusers say.

"We have a constitutional requirement to proceed, a duty to move forward," said state Rep. Jeffrey Piccola of Dauphin County, one of the 10 House members who introduced the impeachment resolution.

Seven articles of impeachment have been drafted against Larsen, a 39-year-old Democrat elected in 1977.

The first article deals with evidence indicating he kept a special list of at least 11 cases to give friends and political supporters preferential treatment in settling lawsuits to accept an appeal.

Another stems from his criminal conviction in 1981 for failing to file a tax return.

"The second of this chamber is such that the articles will be agreed to in the House at a very early juncture," said House Speaker William DeWeese, D-Greene.

Customers find the world's first genetically altered

tomatoes tasty, but pricey.

Associated Press

NORTHBRIDGE, Ill. — It looks like tomato. It feels like a tomato. It even tastes like a tomato. So what's all the fuss?

The answer is in the genes.

The world's first genetically altered tomatoes went on sale Saturday in the Chicago area and in northern California. Customers trying the product said it was a tomato, but only after they tasted it.

"It had a good aroma, a good taste," said Jay Martin of Chicago.

The tomatoes hit grocery stores just a few days after the Food and Drug Administration gave them approval for marketing.

It was the first time the agency had evaluated a whole food produced by biotechnology, although the FDA gave approval in 1991 to a food product, chrysanthemum — a milk-clothing agent used in making cheese.

The tomato's genetic changes allow it to stay ripe longer than Mother Nature ever intended — about 10 more days. That means growers can leave the fruit on the vine longer and allow it to develop more fully.

Critics worry that genetically altered foods could produce problems that set off reactions in people with rare allergies. For example, someone allergic to fish may not know if a tomato has been altered with a fish gene. Allergic crops also could create new traits harmful to the environment, they argue.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture two years ago ruled the plant poses no risk to the environment and Calgene Fresh Inc. said its tomato uses plant genes already widely found in the food.

John F. Kennedy Jr. pays tribute to mother's 'love of family, bonds of home and family and her spirit of adventure.'

Associated Press
NEW YORK - Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis was remembered today as a woman with a spirit of adventure and love of family, one who gave "a lesson to the world on how to do things right."

Family and friends gathered inside a Park Avenue church to speak at a private Mass, while hundreds of people stood outside to pay a final goodbye to the former first lady.

As the service began, John F. Kennedy Jr., in a steady voice, paid tribute to his mother's "love of work, bonds of hope and family and her spirit of adventure."

"I often think of what she said about Jack in December after he died: 'They made him a legend, when he would have preferred to be a man,'" the senator said.

"Jackie would have preferred to be just herself, but the world insisted that she be a legend too," he said. "She never wanted public notice - in part, I think because it brought back painful memories of an unbearable career, endured in the glare of a million lights."

"She guided our history. And for those of us who loved and loved her - she guided our lives."

A private Mass was held inside St. Ignace Loyola Church. It was followed by four limousines carrying the Kennedy entourage and a police escort.

Among those attending the funeral were the current first lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and former first lady Lady Bird Johnson. Also speaking today were Mrs. Onassis' sons, John and Patrick, and her daughter, Caroline, who read a poem.

Christopher Klemmer back home

Reading youngster who underwent surgery to correct a rare heart defect is eager to get back to doing the things 5-year-old boys do, especially riding his bike.

By Peter L. DeCoursey

Five-year-old Christopher Klemmer, who underwent delicate heart surgery in a Mayo Clinic hospital to correct a rare birth defect, returned to Reading Sunday.

Klemmer, accompanied by his mother, JoAnne, was greeted at the Reading Regional Airport by his father, Gary, and three siblings. "Yeah," he yelled when asked if he was happy to be home after a more than one-month absence.

His first priority, his mother said, is to get back to riding his bike.

More than three weeks ago, surgeons substituted a vein for the left ventricle ("Christopher was born without").

Before surgery, the boy continually struggled with respiratory problems because his heart was unable to pump enough blood to circulate enough oxygen throughout his system.

Now, returning to school is only a week away for Christopher.

Christopher Klemmer, 5, at the Reading Regional Airport, as the youngster returned home after heart surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

"He can't wait to ride on the school bus again," JoAnne said.

His parents gloved when their whole family was reunited in health.

"It was a relief to see him and to see him so healthy and happy after all the time he was in the hospital. We were worried about the clinic as they were waiting."

Gary had the children who stayed behind were particularly glad to see JoAnne and Christopher because Angel Flight, the charitable organization that sponsors free flights for patients, was unsure if it could find a carrier.

Christopher needed a nearly constant supply of special oxygen during the journey, and many of the Angel Flight carriers that make similar trips could not provide the oxygen, officials said.

But AirForce Inc. pilots Mark Riding and Alex Wadlow volunteered to make the flight from Rochester, Minn., out of their Danbury, Conn.-based field of operations.

"It's very satisfying to help people return to each other after something like this," Riding said.

Christopher's rights are not firmly on the future - and on reclaiming the prerogatives of a 5-year-old.

"I want to ride my bike," he told his mother several hundred times during the flight. JoAnne said.

Haitian official warns Clinton of attacks on foreigners

Leader of conservative political organization says embargo risks lives of Americans, others living in nation.

From our news services

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Jean Valcuis Estimval proudly calls himself a "tonton macoute" - a member of the paramilitary group loyal to the old Duvalier dictatorship.

As Haiti Sunday completed its first day under a tough new embargo imposed by the United Nations at the prodding of the United States, Estimval said he had a message for President Clinton.

Send U.S. troops to dislodge this country's de facto leaders and the lives of thousands of Americans and other foreigners will be at risk.

"There are Americans, French, Canadians and Dominicans who live in this country," said Estimval, the head of a conservative political organization called the Political Front of Haitian Remembrance.

Estimval is part of a bloc of militant politicians and business leaders strongly opposed to the return of deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"Does Mr. Clinton want to have an international war? If Mr. Clinton invades, what will he do with the foreigners who are in the country?"

Estimval added in what he acknowledged was a warning.

Meanwhile, defying the new attempt to punish Haiti's military leaders, smugglers are shipping in gasoline and diesel oil by the boatload from the Dominican Republic.

Small boats heavily laden with fuel crossed Samaná Lake from the Dominican Republic on Sunday. The four or five people aboard each boat unloaded the fuel in five- and 10-gallon jugs to black marketers on the Haitian side.

From the lake went by rough road to Port-au-Prince, Haiti's capital and main city, is about 35 miles. Haitian soldiers stood by Sunday and watched the unloading of the banned supplies.

The United Nations imposed an embargo on nearly all trade with Haiti at midnight Saturday. If this embargo does not work, President Clinton has not ruled out the use of military force. Vice President Al Gore reiterated such a threat Sunday.

Threats against foreigners, such as the one by Estimval, are heard increasingly in Haiti, as the United States leads a worldwide effort to restore Aristide to power.

Stanley Schrago, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Port-au-Prince, said the United States is being singled out because it is considered the

Safe at home, youngster rests

Mourners bid farewell to Justin McQuillen, a 9-year-old filled with boundless energy who died after a tragic accident on a baseball diamond.

By Bill Bradley

HONEY BROOK - Justin McQuillen was safe at home Monday.

The 9-year-old, who died eight days after being felled by a pitch May 11 during an organized ballgame in Ploverville, was buried following a funeral Mass in St. Peter Roman Catholic Church, about five miles west of this Chester County community.

"When Justin was hurt, we all prayed Justin would get better and come home," said the Rev. Martin E. Woodchick, who celebrated the Mass. "He did."

"In fact, Justin got better than better - he got best because he's in the arms of God."

Doctors said the pitch impaired the Honey Brook youngster's heart function, and that he immediately lapsed into a coma from which he never awoke.

They added that the pitch, which was not tossed unusually hard during the Pee Wee Class B game for 9- and 10-year-olds, struck a soft spot where the boy's ribs did not shield his heart, impairing the pump and, consequently, stealing oxygen from his brain.

The youngster died Thursday. Monday, more than 200 family members, friends, classmates and teammates, many of them wearing the red and gray uniforms of Justin's Honey Brook squad, gathered to say their farewells to the bright-eyed youngster with the boundless energy.

Nos. 22 and 23 were there; so were Nos. 25 and 34, 36 and 38. The funeral took place two days after the 44 teams of the Twin Valley Youth Baseball League, of which Justin was a member, held a fund-raising drive that attracted thousands to the Ploverville squad's home field, located behind Robeson Lutheran Church, along Route 10.

Mothers and fathers held their sons and daughters close as the services unfolded, tow-headed boys were dabbing at their eyes with tissue, grown men and women were weeping openly.

"It is inevitable that we should ask why, why did this happen to Justin who was standing at the

State House opens impeachment case

Debate under way on whether Laven should be first judge in 183 years to be charged with misbehavior.

Associated Press

HARRISBURG - The state House opened impeachment proceedings today against Supreme Court Justice Robert Laven, debating whether to make him the first judge charged with misbehavior in 183 years.

Some articles of impeachment had been drafted, including one with allegations that Laven gave preferential treatment to friends and supporters in deciding whether to accept an appeal.

Several hours of debate were expected before a vote on impeachment, which is akin to being charged with misbehavior in office.

If impeached, as expected, Laven would be tried in the Senate with members acting as jurors and a team of five House members the prosecutors.

If convicted by the Senate, Laven would be removed from office and barred from holding future public office. A trial is not expected before July.

Laven's attorney, William Contopoulos, has promised to fight all attempts to remove the justice. He said he already has begun preparations for a Senate trial by lining up witnesses.

"We are fully prepared for whatever the House is going to do," Contopoulos said this morning.

On Monday, House members asked their Judiciary Committee leaders several last-minute questions. Democrats met for an hour and Republicans for an hour and a

Sextuplets celebrate a birthday

As the children reach age 1, the Dilleys are slowly mastering the art of raising six youngsters.

INDIANAPOLIS — It has taken thousands of diapers, baby bottles and last hours of sleep, but Keith and Becki Dilley are slowly mastering the rare art of raising sextuplets.

The Dilley children celebrate their first birthday today, and their parents have finally adjusted to the seemingly endless feedings and changing.

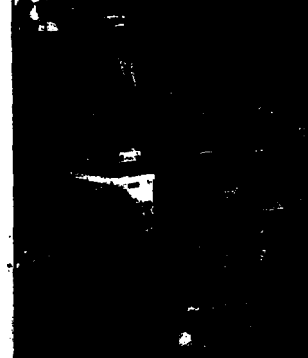

They have cut their daily laundry regimen from six loads to two, and getting the kids into the family van now takes five episodes instead of half an hour.

"I think it's a lot easier than I thought it would be," Mrs. Dilley said. "I talk with mothers who just have one child and they seem to work harder and don't cope as well."

The Dilleys said it is hard to remember what life was like before Adrian, Brennan, Claire, Ian, Julian and Quinn.

"They slept a lot, but not as a unit," Dilley said of the first few months. "We were going on one or two hours of sleep and I wondered how we were going to do it."

State Rep. Frank Dermody, D-Allentown, chairman of a special House committee on impeachment of Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice Rolf Larsen, addresses the House during impeachment proceedings in Harrisburg on Tuesday.

Pa. House charges Larsen

Supreme Court justice to face trial in Senate after legislators support action by 199-0 vote.

Associated Press

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania House has charged Rolf Larsen with misbehavior in office, leaving senators to decide whether to make him the first sitting state Supreme Court justice ever ousted.

The House members who will prosecute the case in the Senate said Tuesday's 199-0 vote to impeach Larsen shows the case against him is evidence against him is strong.

"We were able to convince all members of the House that the evidence was there," said Rep. Frank Dermody, the Allentown County Democrat named to head the five-member panel of prosecutors.

Larsen's impeachment was the first of a Pennsylvania judge in 183 years. Among the charges was one alleging Larsen gave preferential treatment to friends and supporters in deciding whether to accept an appeal.

The unanimous vote to approve seven articles of impeachment came after hours of debate in the House and a year of preparatory and investigative work by the House subcommittee on courts, which Dermody chairs.

The House plans a June 6 procession into the Senate to present the articles, after which the Senate would inform Larsen formally of the charges. A trial is not expected before July.

In a separate matter, the Judicial Conduct Board has sought to suspend Larsen and take away his $105,000-a-year pay based on his criminal conviction last month for using court employees to obtain prescription tranquilizers.

A hearing was scheduled today before the Court

Report: Iraq used chemical attacks

Sen. Riegle contends thousands of Americans in Gulf War were sickened by exposure to contaminants.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Strong evidence exists that Iraq attacked U.S. troops with chemical weapons during the Gulf War, spreading contaminants that have sickened thousands of Americans, according to a congressional report.

Exposure to chemical and possibly biological agents during the war was widespread, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said today in releasing the report.

Riegle, in hearings of the Banking Committee he chairs, demanded that the Pentagon make public all information on chemical exposures and do more to help sick vets.

"I've seen our government lie to us before in other war situations," he said in a room filled by veterans, some crippled by illness. "This is not going to be an issue that gets swept under the rug."

But Edwin Dorn, undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, said the Pentagon has concluded that Iraq did not use chemical or biological weapons during the war and there are no conclusive

"I've seen our government lie to us before in other war situations. This is not going to be an issue that gets swept under the rug."

Sen. Donald Riegle demanding that the Pentagon make public all information on chemical exposures during the Gulf War reports of troops having symptoms caused by exposure to chemical or biological warfare agents.

"There were no confirmed detections of any chemical or biological agents at any time during the entire conflict," he said.

The 160-page report lists more than a dozen incidents where American troops appear to have been exposed to chemical agents, mainly from rocket attacks.

It also says that, contrary to Pentagon claims that nerve agent levels detected by the Czechs and other allies during the war were not harmful, monitoring equipment only picks up nerve agents when levels are 1,000 times higher than what is deemed to be hazardous.

The report includes testimony from 30 Gulf War veterans who say that apparent Iraqi missile attacks were followed by the sounding of chemical agent detectors, the air filling with fumes and burning sensations on their skin.

Almost all are now suffering from the debilitating symptoms of what has come to be known as Persian Gulf syndrome.

There are multiple witnesses to what appear to be best explained as chemical or mixed agent attacks," the report said. "Symptoms appeared simultaneously with alarms going off (and) Patriots intercepting Scuds."

Riegle said his years-long investigation included interviews with 800 American troops, many of whom corroborated reports of chemical exposures.

One soldier stationed in Saudi Arabia reported a loud explosion early in the morning of Jan. 17, 1991, followed by a sounding of alarms and a burning sensation on his face. Of the unit's 110 soldiers, 80 now suffer from medical problems.

Two days later, in another part of Saudi Arabia, witnesses reported a sharp odor of ammonia after a "real bad explosion" and more alarms going off.
